The Journal says that "his disquisition on poetry in general, his comments on the hymns of the Wesleys, and his plea against doggerel, were inter esting and, at times, very laughable, but they were, in a high degree, elevated and When he had concluded with his grand peroration, you were sure that you had heard a man whose literary ability was of a very high order, whose

The City of Cumberland and the Battimore & Ohto Kond.

Mr. R. T. Semmes, City Attorney of Cumberland, Md., has a communication in Saturday's News in which he gives notice that in case the B. & O. railroad authorities take any steps towards dismantling their Rolling Mill at that place, as is talked of, he will proceed at once to recover the property to the ownership of the city, inasmuch as she purchased and gave the road thirty acres of ground whereon to build said mill, on condition that it should at any time be abandoned. The City Attorney also gives notice in his article that he considers the non-use of the property for an unreasonable length of time, "merely because rails can be bought elsewhere at a cheaper rate than they can be manufactured at Cumstantially, as I read it in the Senate, became allow property for an unreasonable length of time, "merely because rails can be bought elsewhere at a cheaper rate than they can be manufactured at Cumberland," will "work a reversion of the property to the city." He makes the following reference to efforts on the part of the people of Cumberland to induce the company to run the mill:

Some time last spring a committee of the city council called on Mr. Keyser and requested to know whether the interests of the road would permit the running of the mill for a few days in each month so as to supply foot to a large number of persons who were out of employment, in consequence of the suspension of operations at the mill some months before, representing to him that if something were not done, the burden of their support would fall on the citizens, who already had enough of that kind of thing to do. To this Mr. Keyser (so the writer is informed) replied that the road would gladly assist if it could, but owing to the troubles throughout the country and the cheap rate at which steel rails could be purchased, it was not consistent with the interests of the road to put the mill in operation, that to do so would entail considerable loss upon the company; that in his opinion the mill would never again be used as a rolling mill, for the manufacture of iron rails; that estimates had been made as to the costs of changing it into a steel-mill, and that it would cost such a large amount of money, that it would not justify the road in making the change now that everts this the mill was affectied. He would not justify the road in making the change now all everts and it will as offered, the road having refused one offer on the ground that the rent was not high enough.

It seems from Attorney Semmes' communication that the same old difficulty in regard to taxation exists between the city of Cumberland and the Company that exists almost everywhere else being of Cumberland and the Company that exists almost everywhere else being of Cumberla hands and improved and increased our taxable basis, which latter we got with a vengance, and the road, true to its liberality towards the people of Cumberland and its business principles, bought land and built hourse upon it and rented them to its employees and converted that land from the taxable basis of the city into stock (sic) which it says is exempted from taxation, and when the city attempts to tax it says "Let's have peace; don't make us mad, we don't want to quarrel with you, because if we did we could hurt you so badly you know." Why it is that wherever there is a railroad in New England that a town springs up, and wherever the Baltimore and Ohio railroad goes an old one becomes older, a manufactory is strangled and a canal, et id owne genus, gradually disappear.

dyicks on the Silver Question.

New York, February 2.—Horl. Thos.
A. Hendricks has telegraphed the Heroid a reply to August Belmont's letter published in that paper on January 30th.
Mr. Hendricks says that the purpose of his (Belmont's) was to show that the views attributed to me on the silver question are inconsistent with opinions heretolore expressed, and, therefore, that I cannot be correctly reported. The report in the Cincinnati Commercial was correct. I do not know how it appears in Eastern papers. I very much desire to be considered consistent, but I would rather be certain I am right than consistent upon this question. FREW & CAMPBELL tent upon this question.

REFERENCE TO THE RECORD.

REFERENCE TO THE RECORD.

Mr. Belmont quotes me as holding that since the act of March 18, 1869, the bonded debt must be paid in gold as contradistinguished from paper or silver. In that he is not correct. The bill to strengthen the people's credit was pending in the Senate in February, 1869. I made an argument against the section which pledged the faith of the government to the payment of the bonds in coin. I opposed it because I thought the contract allowed the payment of the principal of the five-twenty bonds to be made in Treasury notes. Mr. Belmont takes one sentence to show that I held that the effect of the measure would be to pay in gold as follows.

In opposing the passage of the act in that exists almost everywhere else between the Company and the various towns and counties along its line. And it seems also that the same tactics of intimidation, in the shape of a threat to remove some of their shope, has been tried on. We quote from his remarks on this head, as follows:

In the interview above referred to Mr. Keyser took the trouble to inform the attorney that the city of Cumberland would surely not insist upon the collection of its taxes as it now claimed them, because if it did the good feeling between the city and the road would move its machinery and the city would lose more than it would gain. To which the attorney, much to the astonishment of Mr. Keyser, replied that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was carried on upon a business basis, and that whether the interests of the citizens of Cumberland were concerned or not the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad would keep its shope here if it poid, and if it did not, it would move them.

Attorney Semmes does not apparently beligge that any amount of consessions.

Cumberland were concerned or not the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad would keep its shops here if it paid, and if it did not, it would move them.

Attorney Semmes does not apparently believe that any amount of concessions to the railroad company would materially enlist its sympathies on behalf of the people of Cumberland. On this point he expresses himself as follows:

"What has the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company done for Cumberland without profit? What act of favor without hope of reward has she ever shown? On the other hand, the cilizens of Cumberland, as part of the body politic of the State, loaned the road their share of $8,000,000 on condition that the road would release its privilege of exemption from taxation. The road accepted the money, agreed to the terms, and then repudiated them, and, strange to relate, a judge of the court of appeals of Maryland decided that this frand was right, and the State guilty of a violation of the Constitution of the United States in attempting to buy back a right which it had bought with the consent of the party owning that right. The city bought thirty acres of land and gave it to the road for a rolling, mill, which the road, in its love for the city, won't run because on business principles it don't pay. The city spent $150,000 in building water-works, under the solemn assurance that the road would take the water, and because it couldn't get "special rales" that were not given to others, out of its love for the city, and true to its business principles, it built its own water works. Out of its love for the city and true to its business principles, and to enable us to have our gas furnished the passis, which latter we got with a vengance, and the road, true to its liberature to the solution of all the interests of the country, and to the disturbed atta of the public mind true to its business principles, it built its own water works. Out of its love for the city and true to its business principles, and to enable us to have our gas furnished to the passing which is more pro

Trouble in the New Foundland Fisheries.

GLOUZEMER, February 2. — Fishing vessels returning from Fortune Bar bring intelligence of the almost total failure of fishing, owing to the determined hostility of the New Foundland fishermen. This action of the New Foundlanders will result in a large pecuniary loss to Gloucester, and steps have been taken for laying the matter before the government at Washington. Only two American boats secured cargoes, and one of these because the Capitain armed his American boats secured cargoes, and one of these because the Captain armed his crew and threatened to shoot whosoever injured his seines. The seines of other boats had been cut by the hostile fisher-

Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Werd Tonic and Mandrake Pills.—These deservedly celebrated and popular medicines have effected a revolution in the healing art, and proved the fallacy of several maxims which have for many years obstructed the progress of medical science. The false supposition that "Consumption is incurable" deterred physicians from attempting to find remedies for that disease, and patients afflicted with it reconciled themselves to death without making an efort to escape from a doom which they supposed to be unavoidable. It is now proved, however, that Consumption can be cured, and that it has been cured in a very great number of cases (some of them apparently desperate ones) by Schenck's Pulmonic Expurations; and in other cases by the sama medicine in connection with Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, one or boils, according to the requirements of the case.
